FRIDAY, JAN. 8, 1897.

Only 56 more days of Cleveland.

The battle of New Orleans was fought 82 years ago to day.

The Cuban resolution in the Senate has been side-tracked and is not likely to be passed.

Zerucha, the traitor, has hired himself to the Spaniards as a guide, and will accompany Weyler on his next trip.

All of the legislatures elected last fall are now in session and there are lively times around the capitals of many states.

Stephen Crane is in Jacksonville and says he will take the next boat for Cuba, in spite of his fearful experience on the Commodore.

Joel T. Headley, author of "Washington and His Generals," "Napoleon and His Marshals," and other historical books, is dying at Newberg, N. Y., in his 83rd year.

A meeting of the Democratic Committee of the third Judicial district will be held at Eddyville on the 20th inst., to take action in regard to the nomination of district officers.

Officer Billy Corbin, of Newport, Ky., dislocated his jawbone while yawning, and an entirely new subject for humorous paragraphs has been given the newspaper boys.

Gov. Bradley ordered out the Lexington and Harrodsburg companies of State troops Wednesday, to protect the toll-gates in Mercer county from a threatened visit by raiders.

Senator Money has returned from his trip to Cuba. The Spanish would not allow him to go any further than Havana and he did not find out much concerning the situation in the interior.

It is announced from Washington that Joe G. Carlisle will not return to Kentucky, but will locate after March 4 in New York, as chief counsel for the Equitable Insurance Company.

The Frankfort Capital intimates that the Louisville Post is trying to get back into the Democratic party. If this danger is threatened, prompt and vigorous steps should at once be taken to avert the calamity.

A. Boies Penrose, a young man but little over 36 years of age, has been nominated for Senator in Pennsylvania, over John Wanamaker, by a vote of 133 to 7. He will succeed J. Don Cameron. Penrose was Quay's candidate.

The Republicans in Franklin county have made an arrangement by which they will again control the votes of the Palmerites. They are to put J. A. Violet, one of the five men who defeated Joe Blackburn, on their ticket for county judge.

Five negroes are in jail at Birmingham charged with train wrecking. Four of them have confessed to an attempt to derail a train just before the Calaha horror. They deny that they wrecked the Muriel train, but it is believed that the same gang did the work in both instances.

The Owensboro Evening Press, Cicero Sutton's new daily paper, is a bright, newsworthy paper and starts out with encouraging prospects. Mr. Sutton is a very capable newspaper man who was for many years connected with the Messenger. The Kentuckian wishes him success in his venture.

Dr. Clardy's bill appropriating $50,000 for the erection of a public building in Hopkinsville has been favorably reported and will pass the House within a few days. The city postal receipts are now very close to the free delivery line and with a revival of business this year, the city would at once be entitled to a free delivery system. The city directory is being issued just in the nick of time.

The Cuban Steamer Company, which went down off the coast of Florida last Saturday, was a serious loss to the Cuban cause. There were 28 people on board and only 18 escaped and one of those died from injuries received. The survivors reached the shore after a terrible experience in open boats. All of the crew and passengers got into boats, but two of the boats were lost and vessels sent out to search for them could find no trace. The nine men in them have been given up for lost. One of the survivors was Stephen Crane, the novelist, author of "The Red Badge of Courage." He started out in search of material for future novels and had a thrilling personal experience. After being buffeted about for many hours his boat reached land, but was capsized in trying to land and Mr. Crane was rescued and dragged ashore after being seized with cramps.

It is reported that two decisive battles have been fought and won by the Cubans since Jan. 1. Near Cartago 1500 Cubans attacked 1200 Spaniards and defeated them with the loss of 192 killed and 206 wounded. The Cubans lost 96 killed and 100 wounded. The other fight occurred in Pilar del Rio. Col. Segura attacked 2000 men and was whipped and routed and pursued till dark. The Spaniards had 900 killed and 400 wounded. The Cuban loss was small. The news of these battles was suppressed by the Spaniards and was brought to Key West by steamer last Monday.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one remedied disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that disease is Catarrh. Catarrh is the only positive known cure to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces, and so acts as a tonic, staying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

More

Medicinal value in a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla than in any other preparation is beyond question. It is required in many diseases that require a strong medicine. It costs the proprietor and the dealer but it costs the consumer less, as he gets more out of the glass bottle.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar combination, proportion and process, which make it peculiar to itself.

People are employed and more care is taken in the preparation of the sarsaparilla than in any other.

More wonderful cures effected than any other.

More are reported by druggists.

More sold in every part of the country today than any other, and more are being sold daily than ever before.

More still, and the reason might be given why you should take

Exposure to Disease

Does not necessarily mean the contraction of disease, provided the system is in a vigorous condition, with the blood pure and all the organs in a healthy action. When in this condition contagion is readily resisted and the disease germs can find no lodgment. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best medicine to build up the system, as it contains a large amount of rich blood and pure blood is the basis of good health. In cold weather it is especially necessary to keep up the health tone because the body is subject to greater exposure and more liable to disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the safeguard of health.

HIS WONDERFUL POWER.

Capt. Tidley, Who Readily Charmed Snakes with His Eyes.

Some years ago there lived on the Manhattan marsh, a low, grassy territory at the extreme western end of Lake Erie, one Capt. John Tidley. The most remarkable feature about him was his fascinating eyes. Under his powerful gaze he could control all animals that came within his vision, says the Rev. Louis Rappe, Jr. His greatest amusement was charming and capturing snakes. To such an extent did he carry his chilling pastime that Manhattan people, when in his presence, imagined they felt snakes creeping over them. In the spring the banks bordering the marsh were usually covered with snakes basking in the sun. Capt. Tidley then laid in his stock. His family rather objected to his occupying a spare room for his pets, so he built a schooner yacht and named it Tidley. He kept the yacht anchored in Gard Island channel. Capt. Tidley would pick up snakes along the banks in which wild history nuts, and with the same unconcern, encountering a large one, he would stop, set his eyes upon it, and the steady gaze ended in the capture of the snake. The result of one sea son's collection amounted to some 400 snakes from one to six feet in length. These he kept on the Tidley. Should any be out in the marsh he could bring them to him by simply playing a tune upon the harmonica.

As the marsh was seldom visited by any person except hunters and an occasional yachting party, the Tidley was never disturbed in its hideaway. And, in peace and quiet, surrounded by his strange companions, in the fall the famous yacht Fanchon chanced to drop into the harbor. It was manned by three Ohio yacht club men, and, as guests, an active member of the Toledo yacht club and several ladies. A moderate gale was blowing outside. They were forced to seek shelter, and as it increased they found it necessary to remain over night. The ladies were given the whole freedom of the Fanchon, while the men, discovering the Tidley, and believing its owner had gone to the city, leaving the yacht apparently uninhabited, concluded to sleep in her dry cabin. It was midnight when the yachtsmen boarded the Tidley. Three occupied bunks, while the other, a rather stout young man, selected the port. Behind him, however, the world's worries were soon forgotten.

About two o'clock the corpulent yachtsman awoke his companions and asked: "Do you fellows hear that hissing noise about this darned boat? By George! it seems to me as if I've been sleeping on bullrushes all night." Silence still reigned. Finally the Toledo yachtsmen threw a handful of what we called "lily stems" down upon the dozing skipper. An hour later another sailor related another dream he had just had. He declared he was in a den of snakes. And so real was the dream that he felt them crawl over his face and body, coil and repose upon his breast, and try to get into his ears. They again fell into sound slumbers. The snakes kept coming closer and closer to their warm bodies, and the yachtsmen knew nothing of their cold-blooded companions. The party gentleman was the first to awake, when he saw a sight he will never forget. There were snakes over him, under him, about him, and hissing from under his pillow when disturbed. One look was sufficient—he was on deck in a moment, and was immediately followed by the frightened yachtsmen. He had discovered the den of snakes and the party lost no time in getting ashore.

Poison in Rings.

In the middle ages it was believed that rings could be charmed by a magician and that the old rings found in the ancient cities were endowed with good or bad powers, which descended to the person who found an worn them. Rings made of certain metals were deemed very lucky. The ancients made poison rings which were put together with a skill no modern jeweler can rival, for the soldering of the gold plates of which they are made cannot be detected when breathed upon—a test that in modern work always shows the soldering a lighter tint. Hannibal swallowed poison which he carried concealed in the hollow of his ring and Demosthenes died in a similar manner.

D. Wilson's Pen Name.

Ian MacLaren found at least one man in the United States who could pronounce his pen name correctly. When Dr. Watson spoke at Troy, N. Y., he was introduced to the audience by Dr. Hall, a Presbyterian minister, and said: "I am glad to see that Dr. Hall can pronounce my name properly." I am informed that there are no less than 12 distinct pronunciations for Ian in this country, but he has correctly said "Euan."

CLOSE SHOT AT A BIG BEAR.

An Amateur Hunter Has an Adventure Down in Maine.

On Thursday evening four tired but well-satisfied hunters returned to Bangor after a week's trip into the wilds of Maine, bringing as spoils six handsome deer and a great big black bear. The six deer were well deserving of more or less praise, but the bear was the star of the party.

The party consisted of M. L. N. Goldsmith, of Boston; Mr.

William Sykes, an experienced hunter; Mr. Fred Moon, senior member of the firm Moon &

Cratty, proprietors of the Penobscot Exchange, and last, Mr. Henry W. Lash, the hero of the party.

The gentlemen established head-quarters at East Schools. Each had a guide, and early one morning Mr.

Lash, accompanied by his faithful hunter, rusty rifle, etc., started into the woods after game, and big game at that. Seated on a log, Harry waited patiently for his guide to "set him up" for a shot. After an interval of an hour or more, becoming somewhat impatient, he wandered for some distance up a "run-way," and spied a big, ugly black bear slinking off. With the instinct of a natural born hunter, he brought his rifle to his shoulder and located an ounce, or more, of hot lead in the bear.

Maddened with rage, brim turned, and standing on his hind feet, eyes ablaze and mouth foaming, approached Harry, who was much taken aback by the warlike tactics of his excellency. Again he tried to jump a cartridge into the barrel of his rifle, but for obvious reasons the gun refused to be broken down like an ordinary shotgun. Harry dropped it as though it had been set-hair iron, and pulled out a small penknife—his only remaining weapon of defense, and made up his mind, as he stated to a friend afterward, "if the bear had ever got near enough to me he would have known that he was in a fight."

Faster and faster came the bear, and whiter and whiter grew Lash, till finally brain got so near that his hot breath nearly fanned Harry's fevered cheek when "Crack, crack" sounded from near by, and the bear dropped dead with a bullet through the heart from the rifle of the guide.—Portland (Me.) Argus.

ITS STRANGE PROVISION.

The Last Will and Testament of Sir John Scane.

That is a curious story about the will of Sir John Scane, architect-an antiquary, who in 1830 left his house and his collections in Lincoln's Inn fields to the nation for a museum.

The will contained a clause that certain receptacles were to be opened at certain dates, and in 1866 the first of these dates arrived.

A cupboard, or rather box, was opened, but nothing was found in it except a quantity of old letters, accounts and stationery of no value to anyone. In 1886 a similar casket was gone through with the same result, and in 1896 a third receptacle was opened, but nothing was discovered which could account for the testator's careful arrangements. It is suggested that Sir John Scane was playing a trick on the public, not quite from the fact that jokers of that sort enjoy nothing so much as the sight of their victim's distress, where in this case is the joke hidden? Who even among the malicious idiots who indulge in practical joking will laugh? It is much more probable that the receptacles have been quietly rifled, but then what was hidden in them? A will cancelling the bequests to the nation is the most probable guess, or an autobiographical memoir, but neither could have been hidden in three boxes, to be opened at three different times. The only object we can even think of is that Sir John wished the interest on certain bonds to accumulate, and took this odd but direct method of insuring that the interest should not be spent.—London Spectator.

Dificulties of Democracy.

The difficulties of democracy are the opportunities of education. If our education be sound, if it lay due emphasis on individual responsibility for social and political progress, if it counteract the anarchistic tendencies that grow out of selfishness and greed, if it promote a patrioticism that reaches further than militant jingoism and gunboats, then we may cease to have any doubts as to the perpetuity and integrity of our institutions.—Prof. Nicholas Murray Butler.

NOVEL PHOTOGRAPHS.

Combining Two People and Making a Horse Ride 2 Men.

A French photographer has pleased Paris, always charmed with a novelty, by producing extraordinary photographic combinations through an ingenious use of mirrors. The results he attains are novel, surprising and sometimes sensational, as for instance, his bona fide photograph of a well-known Parisian being ridden in the street by his horse. Grottoes combinations, such has this, are, of course, familiar to us all, for photographers have long been able to produce very curious effects by embodying figures from several negatives in one print, says a correspondent of the New York Herald.

The beauty of this last photographic novelty is, however, that the prints do not "give away" the secret as the older methods have done. The photographs invariably do by the stopped postures and incongruous details of the composition, but appear to be single, instantaneous glimpses of real scenes of an altogether impossible nature. They are clever enough to deceive an expert, or to make a superstitious person almost believe in miracles.

All Paris is enthusiastic over one of his pictures in particular. It is a photograph of a gentleman in evening dress, with the face of his fiance daintily poised on his immaculate shirt front. The girl's face seems to be as much a part of the man's figure as is his head, and not merely a picture stamped on the white linen bosom.

This feat is accomplished by posing the figures in such a way that the mirror directly into the eye of the camera. Sometimes the woman's face is reproduced in a smaller form, and in the shape of a heart, and is so arranged as to take the place of the organ in which the god of love is popularly supposed to dwell.

Photographs taken by this mirror process show people in every conceivable position. For instance, two brothers are photographed to appear as one balanced upside down on the other's head. As both are in evening dress, from patent leather pumps to crush hats, it is difficult to decide which one has the picture right side up. Pictures of animals in all conceivable positions are a farce of this photographer, whose art often takes a humorous turn. A very small snake at the cost of swallowing an unusually large elephant is a favorite with those who have a sense of the ridiculous. Other pictures, however, lean to tragic rather than the comic.

A pyramid of babies, to the number of a score, is another picture which attracts a great deal of interest, for, though the tots are still in the long clothes period of existence, they appear to balance themselves with all the sang froid of professional acrobats.

One large photograph which the Parisian camera juggler lately exhibited at an exhibition of pictures, noted more for their oddity than the popular character of their subjects, is probably the most gaudsome of any he has yet taken. This photograph portrays an exceedingly beautiful woman dressed as for a ball, through whose body the bare arms of a man is thrust, the hand clasping the handle of a sword that is dripping with blood. The woman's face is distorted, as though with pain, and she seems about to fall to the ground.

Salt in the Air.

From a series of observations, conducted with great care at Monaco, on the shores of the Mediterranean, says M. Schepel, a French scientist, reports to the Paris Academy the presence of a stratum of air 200 feet above the surface, which is constantly impregnated with saline particles. This stratum of fine, flying salt extends for many miles inland and has been noted at places along sea coasts. It appears to be wholly independent of barometric pressure or the hydrostatic pressure of the atmosphere. M. Schepel says that it is due to the "pulverization" of sea water by the breaking of the surf upon the rocks. He also contends that the phenomenon he points out must not be confounded with what is commonly called "salt spray," the latter being of a much coarser nature. So-called "showers of salt," which often occur at places from 200 to 500 miles from the nearest sea coast point, are attributed by Prof. Schepel to some erratic action of the salt stratum. Salt showers have been reported from towns in Idaho nearly 400 miles from the Great Salt lake.

CHRISTMAS ISLAND.

Bear a Name to Which It Doesn't Seem Entitled.

A traveler from Boston—nearly all the curious travelers are Bostonians—has lately come back from Christmas Island with some interesting stories of what he found there. He seems to have found almost everything except a good and sufficient reason why the island should have the name it bears.

The traveler sailed away from Java eastward and northward, in three days the island bore in sight. It is seldom visited and seems to have no population of its own—it indeed is a coral formation, literally crowded up out of the sea. Successive and very slow accretions of soil have formed, and in this is rooted vegetation of considerable extent and variety.

The island presents to the mariner the aspect of a saddle, two hills forming the pommels. Through the hills are of considerable size they are covered with a coral formation to their very summits, the peak of one of them being an immense limestone.

No stream or standing water was found on the island, as the soil, if it may be called a soil, is so porous that the rain is absorbed immediately. Yet, the vegetation was green and under the fallen logs the earth was found to be sodden with moisture. The traveler spent ten days on the island, and during two of them rain fell heavily. He found trees 150 feet high, of which a large proportion bore edible fruit. This latter was the food of great numbers of birds, whose flesh was found to be exquisite. The place also swarmed with rats and bats. The most numerous of the birds were the large fruit-eating pigeons and a species of broad dove. Neither these knew fear of man, and they were shot by the dozen.

The fact that at an elevation of 1,200 feet above the sea coraline limestone was found, and the formation of the hills, caused as they were with coral from base to summit, led the traveler to observe that Christmas island was unique and a most remarkable example of coral formation. It appeared that from the time the island came within the reef building zone it had been steadily subject to a movement of upheaval, varied by pauses during which the cliffs were eroded by the sea. There is no other such example known.—N. Y. Herald.

PEACOCK PLUMES.

Strange Aversion of the English People.

It is strange that in widely separated countries and among people differing from one another in language and characteristics the same ideas on the matter of luck seem to prevail. But in regard to peacock feathers there is a widely diversified sentiment. It is more a matter of individual preference whether the handsome peacock feather is shunned or adored.

In many parts of Englaud persons are to be found who would shrink, if not with horror at least with dislike, from using the peacock feathers as a decoration. One old woman will tell you that so long as the uncanny feathers are in the house no lover will come seeking the girls of the household, while another will proclaim a string of calico tied to a willow as sure as fate the introduction of peacock feathers into the household.

A curious incident in connection with these feathers occurred a few years ago at Drury Lane theater in London. The pantomime included "NEW GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN KIDNEY CARE." This new remedy is a great surprise on account of its exceeding popularity. It is sold in paste, the blistér, ketchup, back and every part of the urinary passages in male or female. It relieves retention of water and pain in passing it almost immediately. If you wait quiet relief and cure this is your remedy. Sold by R. C. Hardwick, druggist, Hopkinsville.

SUN DIALS VARY.

A sun dial made for London would be useless for either Paris or Edinburgh. The altitude of the pole star varies with the latitude, and this variation is greater at Edinburgh, and less at Paris. At London, and as the sun's rays must always point to the polar star, the angle it makes with the dialplate must vary with the latitude.

OURIOUS LABORATORY.

It is About to Be Established in the Catacombs.

Deep in the bowels of the earth a curious laboratory is about to be established in the Jardin des Plantes, writes the Paris correspondent of the New York Press. Under the gardens run some old galleries of the catacombs, which have not been opened in 100 years. The laboratory which will be established in these galleries will give an opportunity to study the effects of every one of a hundred of the fish without eyes in the cave of Kentucky and other freaks which exist in dark wells and such places. These facts are of great importance in studying the evolution of man and species, but so far no researches upon the subject have been carried out by scientists.

Down in the deep galleries of the catacombs it is always pitch dark, and fish ponds will be dug in the solid rock and stocked with fish to study the effect of the obscurity upon them and their offspring. Animals will also be kept down there for the same purpose.

A good deal of trouble and some danger was experienced in opening up the galleries, which have for so long been closed. The temperature 200 feet below the surface is cold and damp, while the galleries, which had been sealed up in 100 years ago, made it a ticklish undertaking to descend. These galleries undermine almost the whole of Paris and its environs, being used as catacombs and also for growing mushrooms. Under the Jardin des Plantes they have never been used since the stone workers left them in 1779. They are very narrow, and one has to stoop in going through them. In some places the roof has fallen in, but most of the galleries are dug out of the solid rock and will last for all time. The laboratory will be the only one of its kind in the world, and the savants who have undertaken this task expect that the results of their experiments will throw new light upon the doctrine of evolution.

Owensboro has about ten candidates for Mayor, but the friends of Logan Smith are betting on his success.

The Mythical "Aster" or "Osprey"— Fable and Moral.

The Medical Press, in a recent reference to a work on some old legends in connection with drugs, said: "It would be interesting to know if the bird which the author calls 'Aster' is known to modern ornithologists. Speaking of it, he remarks that its song is said to be so strong that flocks are drawn by it as he is flying over the river, and so taken up by him, having one leg like a hawk, the other like a duck." It is not difficult, however, to identify the bird in question. It is the osprey (Pandion haliaetus), which, although not to-day classified under the genus Astur, is related to it. Rev. G. Swainson's "Folklore of British Birds" is a reference to it from Shakespeare. "Coriolanus," act, scene 3:

Mr. Underhill brings to his task excellent abilities which show the result of fine training and liberal culture. Although not technically an actor, he possesses much of the power and spirit which belongs to a successful player. In other words he manages to identify himself with a character in such a way as to produce an illusion. Yet it must not be inferred from this that he aims at stage effects, or that, indeed, he seeks to make any unnecessary display of his talents as an actor. He mimics that of the delineator, and, what is better, of the orationist who has studied in a good school. He neither strains for vulgar points nor does he ever drop into that affected manner which is so painfully crassistic and noisy.

He has a strong voice which he modulates with remarkable ease, a fine, dignified presence, and a thorough knowledge of the art of gesturing. His extraordinary memory enables him to dispense with book or note, and his skillful characterization are the result of the voice, enabling him to portray the various stages of his art.

On the 15th, innumerable artistic exercises, especially polish and a pose of manner, Mr. Underhill is now passing.
